The doctor will use his hands or mechanical instruments upon your body in such a way as to move your joints. This procedure is referred to as "spinal manipulation" or "spinal adjustment". As the joints in your spine are moved, you may experience a "pop" as part of the process.

There are certain complications that can occur as a result of a spinal manipulation. These complications include, but not limited to: muscle strain, cervical myelopathy, disc and vertebral injury, fractures, strains, and dislocations, Bernard-Horner's Syndrome (also known as oculosympathetic palsy), costovertebral strains & separation. The most rare complication is a stroke but not limited to that. The most common complication or complaint following spinal manipulation is an ache or stiffness at the site of the adjustment.

The doctor is aware of these complications, and in order to minimize their occurrence, he will take precautions. These precautions include, but not limited to, obtaining a detailed clinical history of you and examining you for any defect that would cause a complication. If the exam finds a need for x-rays, we will send you out of the office to obtain them. If you are pregnant, please let the doctor know that during the clinical history.

I have read the above information and hereby authorize this office of chiropractic to provide me with chiropractic care, in accordance with this state's statutes.
